In Sammy & Robert Go Home, Sammy & Robert realize the weather is turning cold. Soon, there will be snow. They decide to go home. As they are traveling home, the reader is reminded of their many differences and how these differences are not important. Sammy & Robert started out as best friends, and no matter what they go through, they remain best friends. In Sammy & Robert Have A Happy Thanksgiving, Sammy & Robert have made it home. Their families and friends are happy they are back. All the squirrels are gathering, and storing food for the winter and a holiday feast. The reader learns about the great big grand tree, where squirrels meet, celebrate, and do things together. When Sammy & Robert left for the summer, gray and red squirrels did not get along. The bigger gray squirrels would pick on the smaller red squirrels. While they were gone, things changed. Now the gray and the red squirrel get along and do everything together, including sharing a huge Thanksgiving feast.
