

Revenue Enhancement for Water and Wastewater Systems: Proceedings of the Session Atlanta, Georgia October 9-13, 1994

This proceedings, Revenue Enhancement for Water and Wastewater Systems, examines techniques used in the water and wastewater utility industry to avoid major capital expansions; increase revenue through better planning and management of existing resources; or, in the case of Las Cruces, New Mexico, develop a fee system to equitably allocate the cost of providing new utility service and the cost of adequately maintaining the existing system. These four papers speak directly to these important financial issues of water and wastewater utilities. They will be of interest to any engineer needing to generate additional revenues or avoid major capital intensive expansion projects in order to maintain financial integrity of municipal utilities.
