

Scientist and Strategist, June Rooks (American Women in Science Biography)

This is the true story of June Rooks who grew up in a loving African-American family in Vicksburg, Mississippi. After she contracted polio when she was two, her parents and sisters made a school for her around the family diningroom table. Using braces and crutches, she started regular school at age 10, immediately forging to the head of her fourth-grade class. June earned a scholarship to college and eventually a degree in physics going on to a successful research career at the China Lake Naval Research Base.
