

Edward P. Studt is certain that if he makes the Ridgeview JV football team his social standing around school will get a boost and he might even be able to land a date with Heather Blake, the newly anointed Captain of the cheerleading squad. Ed manages to make the cut when he throws a lucky block against star player Joey Orsolak in the brutal Oklahoma drill. But then he finds that Heather won't acknowledge him unless he wins a starting job. To make matters worse his mom insists that to stay on the team not only must he keep up his nearly perfect grade point average, but he also has to continue his violin lessons with the six feet three inch tall Mrs. Tierney, who loves arm wrestling almost as much as she does playing Bach. THE BOY WHO LOVED BACH tells the light-hearted story of how a talented, yet socially challenged teenager manages to balance the competing pressures of adolescence and escape reasonably sane and in one piece. Literally." Ashton The Book Blogger. "I found it to be thrilling and full of suspense." Tanya at allthingsbooks.blogspot.com "A Pittsburgh Affair is very fast paced, and I soon found myself whisked away on Spencer's adventure of suspense and intrigue....Suspense is prevalent, especially as the novel develops, yet Peters juxtaposes it nicely with comic relief as the characters find themselves in harrowing situations and making unorthodox decisions." Nicole at prettyopinionated.com "The book was really good....I loved this book."
