Summary: Stepping into the third millennium, we face numerous questions about the future and evolution of mankind and of our planet, which presents a marvellous opportunity to cast a glance backwards and discover how ancient cultures counted time. The structure of the calendar of the ancient Egyptians is amazing in more than one way. An indepth study of their astronomical knowledge, displayed on the basis of mythological representations on the walls of temples and royal tombs as well as on texts hewn into stone or written on papyri, has led to the entirely new theory presented here for the first time. For the curious, this book explains in detail the highly sophisticated structure of the Egyptian calendar, and for the aficionado of Egypt, it is an invitation to seek out the sites where he can find and recognise the images, and admire their unique beauty.
