

What Do You Suppose?

Publishers weekly said: This debut from a mother-daughter team jubilantly imagines what kinds of clothes different types of animals might wear. Most of the rhymes have a pleasing, easy cadence, though they are inconsistent in their meter and sometimes have to stretch to make the rhymes work: Chickens who scratch in the dirt, willy-nilly,/ wearing tights and high heels, would look pretty silly./ What kind of clothes would you see on a horse?/ Well, boots and a vest with fringe, of course! Kara Leones digital graphics epitomize cutesiness (her animals have wide Betty Boop eyes, complete with long lashes), though there are some winning images--the aforementioned chickens exude a punk-rock aggressiveness, and its hard not to giggle at a pair of cows that prefer to wear tube tops and tinted sunglasses. A giraffe wears a selection of scarves in eye-catching knit patterns, while for an elephant diva adorned in a crown, pearls, and a feather boa, its all about finding the right accessories. The Leones deliver a lively read-aloud, especially suited for budding clotheshorses. Ages 36.
