Why does anybody want to read a book about money, one of the most boring subjects on the planet? Its simple. Its called reality. If you aint got money, you got nothin. Youre going along cruising through life not too concerned about money because youre making a fairly good wage. What happens if you get fired, your company goes bankrupt, you get sick, get into an accident, your daughter needs to go to an expensive eating disorder clinic to save her life or the world goes into an economic tailspin? How many mortgage or rent payments are you away from being on the street if you got cut off today? Why would any sane person invest their hard-earned money in the stock market or more complex ventures like stock options, REITs or ETAs after seeing how the financial insiders on Wall Street were essentially conducting a loose conspiracy of ripping off honest Americans by constantly pushing them to buy stocks like I see everyday on financial networks and on infomercials even when the market goes way down? The stock market is nowhere near as great as its cracked up to be. All the investing media, stock brokers and investment companies hype it up because they have to, that's their business, to get suckers to get into the game but overall, for most people, the gains aren't all that great and there is a risk of losing a lot of money. It's like the casino. A few flukes win a lot of money, a few knowledgeable people win at poker but by and large, it's only the house that wins the big money all the time like only the insiders of Wall Street. I think buying and managing rental income of good as opposed to slum-type real estate is a safe, solid investment and I also feel that the truly wise, enlightened people figure out a way to earn money by doing something they like to do anyway so they start up a small business venture and don't even waste energy and stress on the crapshoot of the stock market. We should go back to our roots and seriously rethink this matter of investing money in stocks rather than simply being sucked in by all the talking heads on Money TV being bullish on the stock market regardless of what's really happening. Most people who get rich will do it through their own efforts by actually doing something useful. They won't do it through the speculation of the stock market which is legal gambling. The other big lie of a capitalist world is that more stuff equals greater happiness. The truth is that beyond what you need, more equals a headache and a hassle in many cases. You don't need all that much to live well plus you're a prime target for crime if you try to show off your conspicuous consumption of luxury goods you don't need. Nobody needs a 5000 square foot house, especially
